Policies of the Classics Department

PLAGIARISM (each instructor will discuss these matters in class)

1. Any evidence of copying on test or quizzes or other in-class work.

2. Any evidence of copying on any homework assigned to be passed in. Although the department wants to encourage discussion of homework assignments, the final stage of such assignments, including writing them out, must be done independently.

3. Any evidence that students have taken credit in class for the work of others. Students will be expected to acknowledge, when asked, external sources other than the textbook that they use in class discussion.

FOR CLASSICS COURSES AND ADVANCED LATIN COURSES:

4. Any evidence of copying or using unreferenced source material on assigned papers. In writing any paper for which the student uses any source (other than the textbook), the student must give credit so that any one who reads the paper can reconstruct the student's investigation.
